Changes in move towards 4-year University programmes: 3 themes

1. Whole person development
2. A more student-oriented learning experience
3. An integrated and broadened curriculum

“With four years, it will be possible to design a curriculum to support broad learning across several disciplines. This will give students much wider perspectives ... The scope of interdisciplinary studies will be greatly enhanced and potential for having some research experience at undergraduate level will be widened.” (334 Report, EDB, 2005)

Integration & Broadening

Other Implications

- Heavy emphasis on cultivation of analytical, reasoning and inference skills
- Easily neglected values-related objective: development of positive values and attitude
